Ryan Mathis is our Regional Biologist for California and Nevada. Ryan joined our team in 2004. Ryan is a graduate of Humboldt State University with a Bachelor's and Master's degree in Wildlife Management. He has worked for the U.S. Forest Service and USGS in Alaska, Ducks Unlimited in Mexico, and U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in California. He is also a Certified Wildlife Biologist awarded by the Wildlife Society. A native to California, Ryan grew up in the Central Valley. He started hunting at nine years old with his dad and grandpa. Protecting our hunting heritage and conserving wildlife habitat is important to him. Ryan is an avid hunter of big game, waterfowl and upland game as well as a being an avid salt water angler. Therefore, that makes Ryan one of a dieing breed of wildlife biologists – a "Hook and Bullet Biologist". Ryan currently resides in Humboldt County, California with his wife, daughter and two yellow labs.
